Analysis of the Statistical Significance of Hospital Measure Rates

Because the measure rates for the hospitals are for a specific period of time, and because there is variability in performance over time because of chance and other factors, there is a degree of uncertainty about the extent to which a hospital's measure rate may reflect its true underlying performance. Without taking this uncertainty into account, we cannot conclude that a hospital with a measure rate that is higher or lower than the group rate is truly performing at a worse or better rate than the group.

Statisticians use confidence intervals to account for this uncertainty. A confidence interval is a numeric range around the estimate represented by the hospital's measure rate, calculated to provide a specified level of confidence that the interval includes the true underlying performance of the hospital. The confidence level chosen for this analysis, 95% confidence, means that, in repeated collection and analysis of similar data, 95% of the resulting confidence intervals will include the true rate. The use and interpretation of confidence intervals in the nursing-sensitive measures is illustrated below. For any hospital (A, B, C, or D), the measure rate represented by the square is accompanied by a confidence interval (horizontal line). When a hospital's confidence interval does not intersect the group interval, represented by the vertical lines (hospitals A and D in the illustration), we can say that the difference between the hospital rate and the group rate is statistically significant and likely represents a true difference in performance. When the hospital's interval completely crosses the group interval (hospitals B and C in the illustration), the difference is not statistically significant. (When a hospital's interval extends only a small distance into the group interval, the difference may be statistically significant. Additional calculation is required.)

The confidence level of 95% applies to the confidence interval for each individual hospital. In a group of 20 hospitals, one would expect, on average, that one confidence interval does not actually include the hospital's true rate. Hospitals' confidence intervals will vary in width because, among other factors, the measure rate is based on more or fewer observations (i.e., patient days). Abt Associates Inc. advised MHA on the analytic approach and performed the statistical analysis.

Hospitals will be found within the section for their bed-size group. Hospitals are listed alphabetically within bed-size groups below. Not all hospitals will have data for each unit-type. The data graphs are presented in order of hospital-bed size group, low to high.
